ABSTRACT

A reference for teachers, administrators, and social scientists, this directory contains descriptions of 213 social studies/social science service organizations. Entries are listed alphabetically by organization name and provide information on type of service offered, educational level, purpose, current projects, publications, and geographic area served. The directory also contains lists of cross-references to the organization descriptions for executive officers, geographic area served, grade level, services, and subject area. The directory concludes with a list of publishers of social studies/social science curriculum materials. Information contained in the directory was obtained in 1978. (AV)

PREFACE

As part of its role as a linking agent, the Social Science Education Consortium, through its operation of the ERIC Clearinghouse for Social Studies/Social Science Education, has responded to thousands of information requests from educators. Many of these requests ask for information about other organizations in social studies/social science education.

In 1975 the SSEC and ERIC/ChESS published the Directory of Social Studies/Social Science Service Organizations. The first Directory has been praised by many social studies educators who have found it to be a valuable resource. As with most publications of this kind, however, there is a need to continually update the contents. During the past few months Frances Haley and Regina McCormick of the SSEC and ERIC staffs have gathered additional information on existing service organizations and compiled information on new organizations. This revised edition of the Directory is the result. We hope you will find it useful.

INTRODUCTION

This is the second edition of the Directory of Social Studies/Social Science Service Organizations. The first edition, published in 1975, contained descriptions of 111 organizations; the current edition has 213.

The format of this greatly expanded volume of the Directory remains basically the same. There are three major sections: descriptions of social studies/social science service organizations, cross-references, and a list of publishers of curriculum materials. The organizations and publishers are listed alphabetically by name. The cross-references are arranged in five categories: executive officer, geographic areas served, grade levels, services, and subject areas. The numbers used in the cross-reference section correspond to the identification numbers of the organizations, not to page numbers in the Directory.

In preparing this volume, we sent questionnaires to more than 400 organizations with whom ERIC/ChESS maintains close contact. Those organizations most closely related to social studies/social science education were selected for final inclusion in the Directory.

Many organizations which serve social studies educators are not included, primarily those which are affiliates of larger organizations. For example, the National Council for the Social Studies has affiliated state and local councils as well as special-interest groups for state and local supervisors and university faculties. In the interest of avoiding repetitiveness and excessive length, all of these groups were subsumed under the parent organization.

We hope this expanded edition of the Directory will prove a useful tool in identifying and contacting social studies/social science organizations.
